ENGLISH AT HANKOW CONCESSION FLEE

THOUSANDS OF FOREIGNERS' LIVES HANG IN THE BALANCE

World Awaits Fate of Be-leagured White People Exposed To the Fury of the Coolies—American Volunteers Mobilized, But Remain In Headquarters Adjoining English Group—Torch of Fanaticism Let Loose By Bolshevistic Agents In Chinese Army.

For the first time since its establishment as a little English city on the Yangtse river in 1861, Hankow is slipping from British control into the grip of the Chinese Nationalists.

After a night of unrelaxed tension, the outgrowth of the anti-British activities in the Yangtse river region, all the British women and children in Hankow are on vessels bound for Shanghai, while the men of the British concession are concentrated in two buildings.

Many of the American women and children, who had been concentrated at the American consulate, have been transferred to warships and other craft in the river.

The situation continues to be most grave, with the British naval and civil authorities straining every effort to avert clashes and yielding to the Chinese to an extent which a few years ago would not have been dreamed of, all because it is realized that the smallest provocation spark might start blaze of uncontrollable Nationalist disorder.

Following upon the action of the British in withdrawing their marines Tuesday all the volunteer police forces have been disarmed and the Chinese population left free to circulate at will the British quarter.

The British are relying on the pledge of Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, of full responsibility for law and order within the concession.

Chen has insisted the Cantonese forces will be able to keep order in the district which the British policed until a few days ago if the Chinese are not antagonized.

Representatives of laborers, farmers, merchants, students and soldiers have formulated demands to be presented thru the Cantonese government to the British consul, including a demand for indemnity for Chinese killed in the disturbances Monday, with withdrawal of gunboats and an apology to the Chinese government.

All business in the city is at a standstill. The voluntary military organizations of the British community are aboard warships in the river and British subjects have been warned not to venture on the streets.

Meanwhile, the Nationalists are tightening their control. British flags on the municipal building have been replaced by the Cantonese emblem and all other union jacks have been hauled down. Other reports reaching London are that the streets are placarded with signs exhorting the natives to "crush British imperialism."

Chen Thursday night, however, "ten-

DEATH OF INFANT.

Jean, daughter of Thomas and Jessie Smith Coyne, of West High street, died Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock aged four days. The interment was made in Forest cemetery this morning at 9 o'clock by Mader & Ebert.

Old Table Utensil

The "nef" was used during the Seventeenth century and was a shiplike structure, usually of silver, but sometimes of pewter, which served to contain the saltcellar, towel or napkin of its owner. It was usually topped off with his emblem and also carried his coat-of-arms.

dered profound apologies" to the British consul for the desecration by a mob of the British war memorial, and he announced he would undertake to repay the damage to the stone facing of the memorial.

This is in line with the British belief that Chen will do everything in his power to carry out his pledges.

Behind the scenes, however, extremist agitators are trying to force the fighting by such means as the demands on the British consul. These demands were couched in the form of an ultimatum insisting on compliance within 72 hours.

The Episcopal board of Missions of New York Thursday received a cablegram Thursday dated Hankow, January 6, and stated: "Staff in Kankow and Wuchang are safe and well. No violence reported from outstations."

The signer of the dispatch is Right Rev. Logan H. Roots, missionary bishop of the Episcopal district of Hankow.

PRISONERS RETURNED.

John Buzzard, Virgil Slagle and Rance Slagle, of Muhlenberg township, placed under arrest at Darbyville several weeks ago on the charge of being intoxicated and disturbing the peace, fined by Justice Friece and released on parole providing they went to work and paid the fine and costs assessed against them were rearrested by Deputy Sheriff Porter Thursday and brought back to this city and placed in jail. They violated their parole by not doing as they promised.

Emulating Elephant Is Urged for Longevity

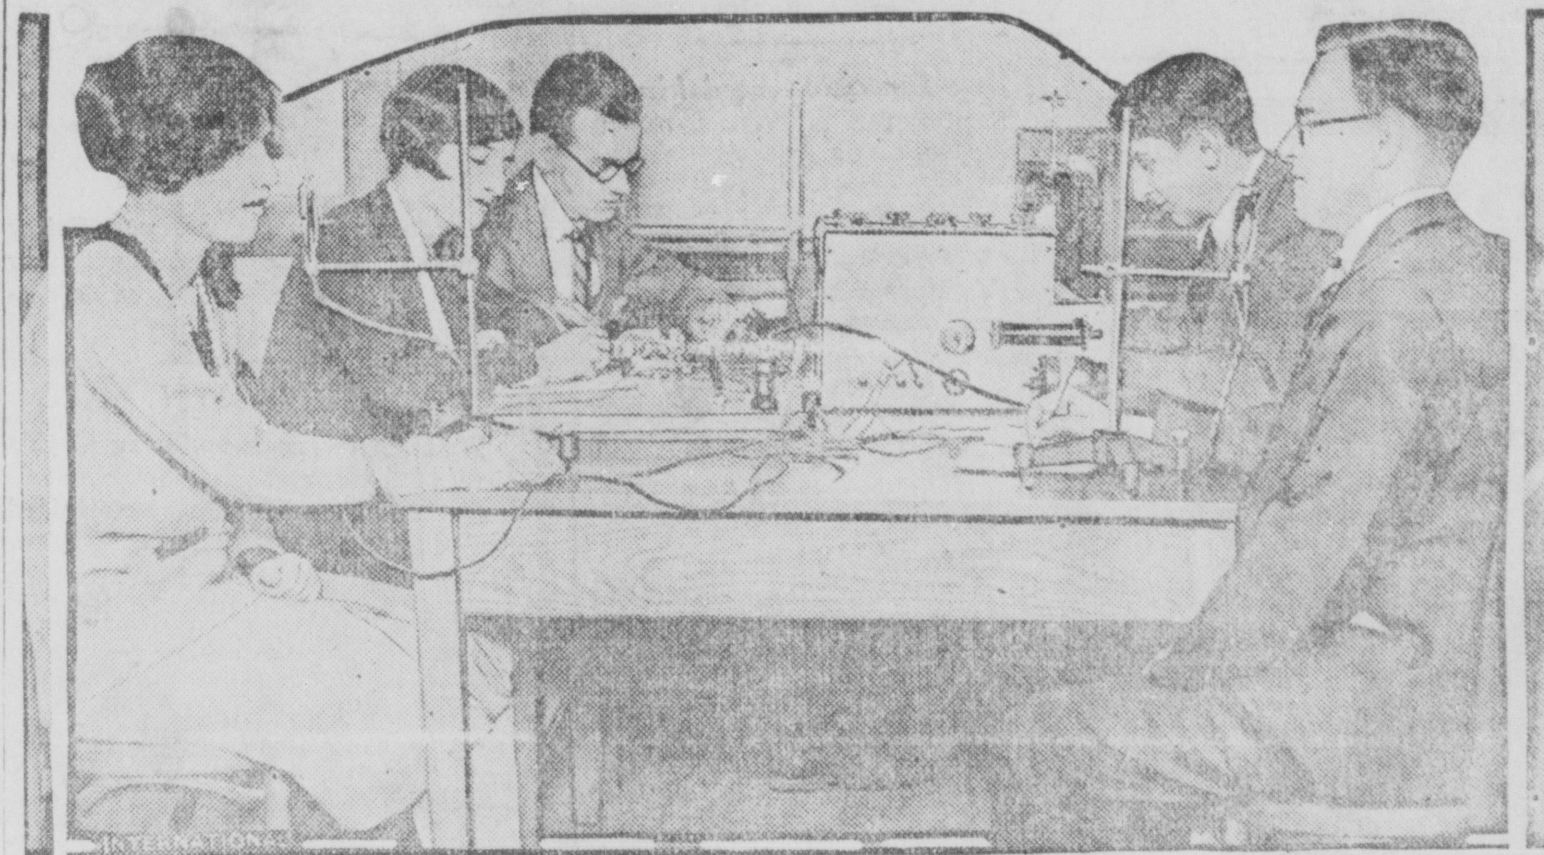

New York.—To be cool and calm at all times and impervious to the unpleasant titillation of nerves emulate the elephant, says Thomas R. Gaines, a lecturer before the Brooklyn Institute on "The Science of Health."

The longevity of the elephant, Mr. Gaines asserts, is directly attributable to his poise and repose, and those in turn may be traced fairly certainly to his habit of slow breathing. The elephant breathes only five times a minute as compared with eighteen for the normal human.

While his audience made experimental sniffs, Mr. Gaines enunciated the requisite remainder of his theory:

"The general attitude should be one of wholesome indifference."

Detecting Crime by Electrical Machinery

By use of an "electrical third degree," Dr. A. P. Link of the psychology department, New York university, demonstrated that crime can be detected by machinery. Three persons were used as subjects, one of them being supposed to have knowledge of a "crime" and the others to know nothing of it. The three were subjected to successful tests by three electrical devices to determine the guilty party. One machine records the time required to answer questions. A second device, the electrical stethoscope, magnified the heart beat, and the third was an apparatus for measuring electrical resistance of the human skin.

High-Speed Insect Suggests Plane Design

Washington.—One branch of aviation research has been turned from study of the planing gull and the soaring eagle to scrutiny of a tiny fly as holding the possible answer to "the next step" in airplane design.

Not long ago an American entomologist, standing beside a canyon in the wilds of Brazil, saw a flash of color—a mere blur of orange—flit before his eyes. A search identified the insect-missile as a new variety of deer-fly, scientifically catalogued as the cephenomyia, and capable of flight at the speed of 815 miles an hour, about half the speed of a rifle bullet.

His report aroused interest of engineers, several of whom are now studying the "stream lines" and motive plant of the new subject. The fly is about the size of a bumble-bee.

Unique American Woman

I have made the admission more than once that of all the women in the world the women of America always appeal most strongly to my attention. I have, I believe, for many years vainly attempted to get into the minds of my countrymen the idea that the American woman is a unique specimen of the sex, standing in temperament, in conditions, in outlook, apart from her sister in other nations.—T. P. O'Connor.

Man Not Only Harvester
Man is not the only animal engaged in harvesting. For example, says the Nature Magazine, how many of the following actually store food for future use so far as you can determine during October: Woodchucks, chipmunks, red squirrels, deer, muskrats, meadow mice, deer mice, skunks, dogs, cats, cows, horses, sheep and others?

Emergency Gowns

Late Paris Mode

Dresses Between Formal
and Informal Are Shown
in New Designs.

A wardrobe may boast of stately velvet gowns, of chic jacket suits, of ensembles for the day and ensembles for the evening, but until it includes one or more of those unpretentious yet useful garments designated by the French designers as "little" gowns, it cannot be said to be complete, asserts a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times. These little gowns are, in reality, emergency gowns, suitable for most occasions short of the very formal or informal—they combine cheerfully with the odd coat or, if necessary, serve as street dresses on warmer days.

Such a dress is the one from Jaquet in a soft black crepe satin, draped, if so slight a movement could be called draped, to the left side. Like most of the new draped dresses, this gown has in the back a bloused waist above a straight skirt, with the waist surplice in front draping to the left and the skirt following it with a slightly lifted line. One of the narrow fur bindings new this season, consisting in this case of an inch-wide binding of beaver, follows the surplice neckline to tie in a huge, flat, French bow-knot at the left beltline before it continues on down the overlapped side and around the bottom of the skirt. The long bell sleeves over a puffed undersleeve also have the narrow edging of beaver.

Exaggerated use of military braid—black, gold or silver—that is a characteristic of the new Paris collections, is exemplified in a little gown from Lucille made in a fine black serge. A straight dress, depending for fullness in the skirt on an inverted plait at either side front, forms the foundation for this gown. Half-inch military braid in black and red makes a soldiery row, down the front of the waist, of flat loops held together by a gold button as the uniforms of officers are decorated in musical comedies. The pockets on either side of the skirt over the inverted plaits are trimmed in official-looking loops of the braid, with the straight ends extending to the skirt hem. The round cuffs flaring back from the hand—typically a fall of 1926 cuff—are also braided. A stiff little turnover collar, edged with black ribbon ruching and tied with a severe black ribbon, completes this smart costume.

The new trimming line that is best described by the term, "harness trimming," is found on a gown from Yteb in beige crepe de chine. This harness trimming consists of an inch-wide line of embroidery, or of contrasting material, applied across the back of the shoulders, continued down the upper side of the arm and encircling the elbow where a puffed lower sleeve is attached. In the model from Yteb, this trimming is made of two narrow strips of velvet in shades one a little lighter and the other darker than the beige of the dress. The straight ruffles of the three-tiered skirt bear this same narrow trimming and the crushed wide girdle is of velvet in the same two shades.

Hand-Embroidered Frock
For a Christmas Present

Just suppose some little girl, your wee daughter or your neighbor's should receive a Christmas gift of a hand-embroidered French gingham pantie-dress, like the one here pictured. Wouldn't you just love to see the sparkle of this little girl's eyes as her tiny fingers excitedly withdrew it from the gayly-wrapped box which Santa Claus had addressed to her? Well, why not let this solve the problem of "what to give?" The design on each pocket is done in cross-stitch this peasant embroidery being very popular for children's dresses. A solid colored chambray binds the neck, also cuffs the sleeves and the knickers. This model could be successfully carried out in any checked woolen material.

Discovered in a double boiler...

the secret of tempting pies, cakes and cookies

WOULD you ever think of looking in a double boiler to find the secret of baking cakes "like mother used to make"?

Yet it was in the double boiler that the secret was discovered. It's really quite simple. Cereals and other delicate foods, you know, do not scorch when cooked in a double boiler—its construction permits the heat to be distributed evenly throughout its contents. And now, in the oven of the Estate Gas Range, this same "double boiler" construction has been adopted. This oven, built on the two-wall, "double boiler" principle, bakes with uniform heat. There are no "hot spots" to cause scorching, no shifting of pans, no "peeking in" necessary—pies, cakes and cookies come out symmetrical in shape and color.

Let us show you today how, in the double boiler, the secret of successful baking was found.

PROOF THAT CLERK
COULD BE TRUSTED

Maj. Chester Mills, prohibition administrator of New York, was talking about bogus prohibition agents who extort bribes from druggists and other dealers in alcohol.

"And yet," he said, "the rascality of these men is very transparent. In fact, they give themselves away at every turn. They remind me of an anecdote.

"A young man ran out of money at an Atlantic City hotel. This was bad, for he was posing as a rich young man in the hope of making a rich marriage. So, in his predicament, he took one of the hotel clerks into his confidence.

"Say," he whispered, drawing the clerk aside, "take this watch of mine out and hock it, will you? I'm on my uppers. But can I trust you? Not a word to any of my swell friends here, mind!"

"The clerk slapped him on the back in a reassuring way.

"Why, old-timer," he said, "you can trust me to the death. Only yesterday Miss Jones-Jones, the young lady you golf and motor with, gave me her fur coat to hock, and I ain't breathed a word to a livin' soul!"—Detroit Free

KEW GARDENS OWE DEBT TO GEORGE III

Director Tells of Great Aid
Given by King.

Washington.—King George III, the royal booby man of early American history, may not have "known his outs" in the matter of colonial politics, but he was no fool when it came to knowing other plants and securing the best scientific and economic results from them, according to the testimony of Dr. A. W. Hill, director of the Royal Botanical gardens at Kew England, who is touring the United States on a series of visits to American botanical laboratories and gardens.

The Kew establishment, now the largest botanical gardens in the world was initiated by the mother of George III, who set aside two adjoining palace gardens for this purpose; but it was George himself who, through his friendship for the early English botanist, Sir Josiah Banks, really gave shape and purpose to the donation and started the immensely profitable practice of making Kew the headquarters for the transplantation of new and valuable tropical species from one British colony to another.

Since that day, Doctor Hill states, practically every important transplan-tation of plant industry in the British empire has passed through Kew. Among these have been the establishment of the Para rubber industry in Malaya, the transfer of the cinchona quinine tree from South America to India and the East Indies, and the development of the vast cocoa plantations in West Africa.

But King George and the botanists of Kew must not be given credit for starting the business of plant introduction, though they were the first to make a science of it, Doctor Hill says.
In early post-Columbian days the Spanish galleons plying between Mexico and the Philippines frequently carried valuable plant species from the new world to the old, and vice versa.
But before the Spaniards there must have been other unrecorded voyagers among the brown-skinned peoples of the Pacific, for there are many plants, notably the coconut and the banana, whose wide distribution cannot be explained on any basis other than human carriage.

Collects 70 Songs in Eulogy of Lincoln

Springfield, Ill.—Campaign songs, hymns of praise and funeral marches, more than 70 in number, eulogizing Abraham Lincoln, have been collected by Georgia L. Osborne, librarian of the Illinois State Historical library.

"The first songs in honor of Mr.
Lincoln," Miss Osborne said, "were campaign songs, including 'Freedom's Call,' 'We See the Break of Day' and 'A Campaign Song for Abraham Lincoln.'"

"A number of the songs were written in negro dialect, the most famous of which were 'Ise on de Way,' 'De Day ob Liberty's Comin',' 'When Will Dis Cruel War Be Over,' and 'Gib Us
Darkies Rest.' Other songs were written in negro dialect, the most famous their troubles and their hope and faith in Lincoln.

"Strangely, one of the ballroom gems of 1865 was named 'The Lincoln Schottisch,' the same year that the funeral marches were written for the martyred president."

Numbered among the songs written after Mr. Lincoln's death were "The Nation in Tears," "A Nation Mourns
Her Martyred Son," "The Death Knell
Is Tolling" and "Rest, Noble Chieftain."

Fire Machine Withdraws Smoke for Firefighters

Minneapolis, Minn. — Minneapolis firemen may soon lose the appellation of "smoke eaters," for they now have a machine that literally "eats" the smoke for them at fires.

The device resembles the "steamer" type of fire engine. It has a boiler-like apparatus with a suction fan attached to a huge hose, about 15 inches in diameter.

The hose is run into smoke filled rooms and the smoke drawn out. It has proven especially successful in fighting stubborn basement blazes, where there is much smoke but little fire.

gaged in polo, pugilism or aviation are

One Fir Tree StumpMakes Home on Auto

Montesano, Wash.—A tour in a Douglas fir log is under preparation by E. W. Wade, who is making an automobile body from a giant tree.

The apartment plan calls for a combination bedroom and living room with two folding beds, two clothes closets, a combined kitchen and dining-room and china closet. The log home is to be electrically lighted throughout and have electric cooking appliances. The stump measured 9 feet 4 inches across and is now 16 feet long, weighing 4,250 pounds.

When complete the house goes upon a truck and trailer.

to Tune of 39 to 13.

In a listless one sided game the C.
A. C. boys severely trounced the league leading Fountain Drugs of the Capital City Thursday night at the C.
A. C. gym by a 39 to 13 score.

The local quintet were not at any period of the game forced to extend themselves and could at will break up plays and score points. In order to give the few fans in attendance a play for their money frequently pulled plays that proved their ability as basketeers.

It is possible that the Druggists had an off night. This can happen to the best of teams, yet nevertheless they put up a very poor game and one is inclined to wonder why they have made such a mark in the Capitol City.

Next week the club will meet St.
Paul's Evangelical church team of Columbus. This team appeared on the local court last year and gave the club a good battle. The club being forced to use all its reserve energy to win.
Without doubt this team has improved and will again put up a real fight.

REVISE ALPHABET AND SAVE BILLION

Professor Would Shorten Thought Expression.

Philadelphia.—"Revise the alphabet and save a billion dollars a year."

This was the advice given by Dr.
Godfrey Dewey of Harvard university, a speaker at the English language congress.

Doctor Dewey's suggestion for a new alphabet was followed by presentation of a concrete scheme.

He showed the members a new system of letters, considerably in excess of the present 26.

The proposed alphabet includes 24 consonants, 13 vowels, 4 diphthongs and a sign for the word "the," which in itself takes up 7 per cent of all the words in "the printed page," he said.

By introducing this new alphabet fewer symbols would be needed to express a thought. Lone words would be spelled with a few letters. Such a word as "through" could be expressed in three symbols.

Millions of tons less print paper would be required, according to advocates of the plan. Huge sums would be saved in type composition.

Typists could do their work in less time, as could letter writers. Readers would do their reading quicker and the human eye would be among the agents benefited.

Books and newspapers would be smaller and lighter, therefore costing less. The general result would be a saving in materials and labor, which means a saving in time.

The English teachers pondered Doctor Dewey's statement that the greatest problem of printed English today is a "typographical problem" and straightened in their chairs when the Harvard professor advised them to throw out all plans for reforming the language by the use of phonetic signs in dictionaries, and to call in the type designer to make the whole business over again.

To Doctor Dewey, the immortal 26 of the English alphabet is very bad and a new one is needed.

Longer to learn, the professor admitted with a smile, and an awful job to introduce, but easier and cheaper, when all's said and done.

Skeleton Long in Earth

The fossilized skeleton of a prehistoric reptile has been unearthed at a depth of 50 feet at Fletton, Peterborough, England. The skeleton is 6 feet long in the body, and has 4 paddlers or flippers, each measuring 3 feet.
The reptile is thought to be a pliosa-urus ferox or fierce crocodile. Judging from previous discoveries, the age of the skeleton is estimated at over a million years.

Besides her husband, she leaves one son, Willis Ludwig Jr. Of her immediate family, one sister, Mrs. Minnie T. Coates, of Colebrook, New Hampshire, is living.

Among those who attended the funeral from out of the city were Charles Ludwig, of Orient; Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Tuller, of Dublin; Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Haynes, of Columbus; Howard Haynes and the Misses Miller, of Arlington; Mrs. Mabel Shipman, of Cleveland; Mrs. Maggie Richards and Mrs. H. T. Linke, of Columbus.

The pallbearers were Charles Ludwig, George H. Roof, Dr. H. D. Jackson, Joseph Wilder, T. E. Ross, Bernard Young, George F. Grand-Girard and Fred L. Fickardt. Interment in Forest cemetery.

Knew Where to Get It
Harry, a lad of eight, was dining at the Wilson home. He was bashful and backward and ate his meal with great difficulty because of his embarrassment.

A few minutes after the meal was over, Harry, rubbing his face with his cap, exclaimed:
"Well, now I guess I'll go home and get a good dinner."—Indianapolis News.

Faithfulness
Give us a man, young or old, high or low, on whom we know we can thoroughly depend—who will stand firm when others fall—the friend faithful and true, the adviser honest and fearless, the adversary just and chivalrous; in such an one there is a fragment of the Rock of Ages.—Dean Stanley.

Dick's Tomorrow Came
By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"BROKEN your engagement to Dick?" repeated Mrs. Merton, with a long searching look at her daughter.

There was an almost inaudible "yes" and then silence on the part of the girl at the window.

"Would you like to tell me about it, Helen?"

Helen shrugged her shoulder. "Any one might guess, mother. It is Dick's habit of taking the little end of things in such a cheerful way. At the office, for instance, he will not push himself toward a better position. He always says, 'I'll just plug along—my turn will come tomorrow.' Yesterday, it seems that Mr. Franklin suddenly resigned his position as head of that department, and Arnold Smith walked right into the president's office and asked for it—and got it! Dick just calmly poked along, never thought of asking for the advancement, thought it was a fine chance for Arnold Smith! When I scolded him about it he merely laughed and said the same old thing!"

"That his turn would come tomorrow?"

"Yes. Then—one word led to another—and I told him I would not marry a man who did not recognize opportunity when he saw it—and so I ended it."

"Yes, dear, you ended your engagement for the same reason that you blamed Dick—you could not see and recognize an opportunity to hold the love of a mighty fine man with a great future!"

Helen, unconvinced, went upstairs to prepare for her afternoon bridge party. Dick had gone out of her life, she did not realize what had happened.

"It's a wonderful thing for Arnold," said his sister, Freda Smith, "an increase of a thousand a year out of a clear sky—though he did ask for it! Mr. Blake told him that they were going to offer the vacancy to him."

"Helen, I should think Dick Lang deserved promotion if anyone did," ejaculated tactless Beth Blake. "Dick has worked there for years longer than Arnold, I told Dad my opinion last night, and he only laughed and said that Dick would have his promotion some day! I like Dick—he is a dear, and if he was not your property, Helen, I would smile upon him more sweetly than I do now."

It was rather an unhappy summer for Helen Merton. After awhile the news of the broken engagement leaked out, and Helen saw Beth Blake deliberately focus her attention upon Dick Lang. Dick must be working very hard this summer for he looked rather thin and worn, but Helen only met him face to face once, and then his greeting was gravely courteous. He was seen driving Beth Blake in his shabby little car, and Mrs. Blake was quoted as saying that "Dick was a rising young man."

Then one night the blow fell. Merton sat down at the dinner table one August evening and glanced toward his wife. "They say young Lang has lost his position," he said.

"Oh, James, I am so sorry. Poor Dick has worked so hard—" Helen could listen to no more. With a murmured excuse she escaped to the old garden which had known all her joys and all her sorrows. She went to the very end where the gate opened into the orchard and discovered that her heart was racing madly. Poor old Dick and his never-to-be realized "tomorrow"! She was bowed with shame over her treatment of him. Through her tears, she glimpsed the blurred outlines of the old Lang house where Dick lived with his parents. She wanted to run over there as she had done in the past happy years—she wanted to tell Dick she was sorry he had lost his position and if he still loved her she still wanted to marry him and together they would make a future!

She was half way through the orchard when she saw him coming, and she ran to meet him with wet eyes and outstretched hands.

"Oh, Dick, Dick, father has told me, and I am so sorry."

Dick took her hands and looked down at her very tenderly. "What did they tell you, Helen?"

"That you'd lost your position."

"They are saying the same thing all over town," he acknowledged.

Somehow, the incoherent words tumbled from her lips, were at last whispered brokenly on Dick's breast.

"And so you are willing to help me build a home, out of nothing?" he asked at last. "Helen, are you willing to tie yourself to a man without a future?"

"We will have each other, Dick, and we will be happy together."

"So we will, darling, but you have misunderstood things a little and I am glad, too, for it reveals that you do love me after all. They are telling it as a great joke that I have lost my position with the Blake company, but they always add that I have a new position there—secretary of the company. Isn't that wonderful?"

"Above Arnold Smith!" said Helen breathlessly.

"Yes—and he's engaged to Beth Blake!"

"I don't care how high he soars, as long as I can have you and your tomorrows," sighed Helen.

AMUSEMENTS

If you want a college education in the course of an hour,—one devoid of study, yet teaching the latest thing in laughs,—get down to the Met theater toute de suite!

The reason? Bebe Daniels! She's back again—the same vivaciously dashing bit of femininity who romps thru Paramount comedies to the accompaniment of a thousand laughs. This time they're all dressed up and steeped in college atmosphere. "The Campus Flirt," written by Louise Long and Lloyd Corrigan, was directed by Clarence Badger.

Bebe is cast as a "miscal"—a girl who is sent to an American coeducational college because it is her father's alma mater. He feels that has daughter's snobbish, arrogant ways are merely a veneer thru which the girl's true character will come smiling after a period of shoulder-rubbing* with other students.

Of course, Bebe gets off on the wrong foot. How she changes and finally "finds" herself, creates and causes an ocean of laughs.

Heading the hand-picked cast we find Charlie Paddock of cinderpath fame. He displays fine acting potentialities and should go far in his new field of action. James Hall and El Brendel, respectively, take care of the love and comedy interests. Joan Standing, Gilbert Roland, Irma Korrelia and Jocelyn Lee are also in the cast.

x HARTMAN THEATER. x x x x x x x x x

The coming to the Hartman theater, Columbus, on Monday, January 10, of "The Vagabond King" accredited the most thrilling of all musical plays for a one-week engagement, will unquestionably interest many music-lovers and theater goers in this community. This production, which calls for a cast of one hundred and twenty-five people but recently closed its New York engagement after a run of five hundred and sixty-seven performances — a record of which, it is believed, will stand for a long time.

As most people know who keep in average touch with important theatrical affairs, "The Vagabond King" is based on the beloved Justin Huntley McCarthy drama, "If I Were King" so successfully and brilliantly played by E. H. Sothern some twenty-five years back. And now, they have taken the play out of the Sothern repertoire and fashioned it into a lovely and glamorous romance in four acts and seven scenes, the latter depicting Old Paris during the unholy reign of Louis XI, 15th century. Rudolf Friml, the young Bohemian composer of the scores of "Rose Marie," "Firefly," "Katinka" and other popular successes, provided the lyrical setting for "The Vagabond King" and wrote what eminent music authorities agree is his greatest light opera. The score abounds in immense choruses, the now-famous "Song of the Vagabonds" being acclaimed the most thunderous ensemble ever composed for the stage. Other delightful song hits the play include "Only a Rose," "Love Me Tonight," "Tomorrow," "A Flagon of Wine," (done by 30 male chorus) and "Huguette's Waltz." A beautiful corps de ballet and an orchestra of thirty are other noteworthy features of "The Vagabond King."

There will be matinees at the Hartman on Wednesday and Saturday and the theater management announces that mail orders for this extraordinary attraction, sent in from this place, will have special attention.

Hercules, Man of Strength

WHENEVER the Greek gods of Mount Olympus were confronted with a hard task, they sent for Hercules, whose mighty strength could be depended upon to accomplish anything.

Hercules would find little to do in modern times, when machinery accomplishes our Herculean tasks. The demand of modern times is not for great strength, but for energy with which to keep up the swift pace of our day. Corn is an excellent energy food.

The heart of the corn is very rich in fat. The percentage of protein is fairly high. It also contains the carbohydrates, starch and sugar. And experiments have proved that corn is very digestible, that its food elements are almost completely utilized by the body.

Koch's Brilliant Use of Gift "Plaything"

The birthday gift of a microscope to Robert Koch by his wife, was the first step in the transformation of a struggling country doctor into a brilliant scientist, one of the world's great microbe hunters.

With his new plaything, as Mrs. Koch had called it, he discovered the germ of anthrax and began an exhaustive series of experiments that proved the theory that had been voiced by Louis Pasteur, that there were such things as terrible man-killing microbes, says Paul DeKruif in "Microbe Hunters."

He also identified the white plague bacillus and the microbe of cholera. Then he learned how to grow disease germs and by infecting healthy animals, proved that maladies were caused by the rapid multiplication of the tiny organisms.

COLUMBUS BANKS TURN DOWN SOLDIER LOANS

Clearing House Manager Says Cost Is Too Great and Repayment Uncertain.

Loans upon adjusted service certificates will not be made by Columbus banks.

This announcement was made Tuesday by Allan Rabourn, manager of the Columbus Clearing House association, who said the biggest objection to the loans lies in the length of time that the money will be tied up in these loans.

No definite promise by the government that it will pay the loan if the veteran does not; difficulty in identifying the person applying for the loan as the veteran named in the certificate, a duty placed by the law upon the banks, and the reams of official "red tape" surrounding the entire transaction are three of the reasons given by the Columbus banks in their refusal.

Under the law, Rabourn pointed out, the bank cannot even make a claim upon the government until six months after the date of the loan. Even then, under the law, the bank has no assurance that it will be repaid. The law says that "the director, may in his discretion accept the certificate and note and pay the bank in full satisfaction of its claim," but there is nothing to compel him to do so.

BURY STAGE DRIVER

"Shep" Grove, 95, Drove Coach Between Urbana and Piqua.

Urbana, Jan. 5.—Shepard "Shep" Grove, 95, Civil war veteran and pioneer stagecoach driver between Urbana and Piqua in the days of '49, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Eva Miller of the Hotel Urbana, was buried today.

Mr. Grove used to recall the stirring days when he drove his stagecoach between Urbana and Piqua, a distance of 25 miles. It required four hours to make the trip. Today a motor bus makes it in 50 minutes.

Mr. Grove started as stagecoach driver when 16. Soon, however, the railroad took away his passengers. He then became the driver of the Urbana fire engine, drawn by three horses.

Of late years, Mr. Grove's chief duty was to see that the Grand Army flag was displayed on proper occasions from the flag pole in the center of Monument Square.

"Sent to Coventry"

This phrase, which is in quite general use in English schools, means to ignore a person absolutely. The generally accepted explanation is that the citizens of Coventry objected at one time to the soldiers sent to the town. They treated them with silent contempt, and for a soldier to be ordered to the town meant little less than a mild excommunication.

European Standard Time

Most European countries use standard time based on one of the even-hour meridians as reckoned from Greenwich. This custom is followed by all European countries, except Ireland, Holland, Russia and Greece, which base their time systems on meridians of their capitals. In Russia railways are run on Pulkowa time and in Holland on Amsterdam time.

Make Ready Now for Gardening

Never Too Soon to Get Equipment Ready for Growing Early Plants.

The vegetable gardening department at Cornell says that everything should be made ready to grow early plants long before the equipment is really needed. The equipment includes plenty of good soil, flats, pots, spotting boards, hot bed sash, mats to protect the frames, and manure suited for hot bed use.
Equipment Short Lived.
All of these things are exposed constantly to warmth and moisture when they are used, and so have a short life at best. Flats may need re-nailing, sash possibly should be re-glazed, and other small items of carpentry be done to good advantage.
Soil for growing plants should be well mixed and screened so that lumps, stone and trash are removed. Soil too rich tends to produce plants which are spindly and thus easily susceptible to damping-off disease. Compost consisting of well-rotted manure, loam, and sand added makes a good mixture. The sand keeps the soil from baking and crusting and will prevent puddling when the soil is watered.
Spacing Device Helps.
A device for spacing the plants in the flats or beds is a labor saver for transplanting seedling plants. The state college uses spotting boards with pegs spaced one and a half by one and a half and two by two inches. This device can be made of pine lumber by any one. "Cut a board of three-fourths inch material the length and width of your flats," says the college. "Drill five-eighths-inch holes in this board the desired distance apart (one and a half by one and a half or two by two inches) and into these holes set pegs about two inches long which have been tapered down to one-fourth inch diameter at the tip. Cleats nailed on the ends will insure even spacing of the spotting board provided all your flats are of the same size. In one operation you firm the soil and mark the flat with a series of holes evenly spaced to receive the seedling. Even spacing in the flat gives more uniform growth of the seedlings, and the straight rows aid in cultivating the seedlings."

Use of Rotted Manure for Enrichment of Soil
Rotted manure has its place in certain forms of soil enrichment but it should be remembered that manure cannot rot without a distinct loss in fertility elements. A ton of rotten manure may represent anywhere from a ton and a half to two tons of fresh manure, depending on how long the rotting has been going on. For the quick starting and rapid growth of trucking crops farm waste in well-rotted form is commercially helpful since a few days' difference in getting the truck to market may make a great difference in the price received for it. But in the case of dairy and general farming the best place for manure to rot is under the soil. The fertility elements which the rotting releases are then taken up by plant roots or otherwise conserved. There is never any loss when manure rots underground.
Attention to New Rams Will Prove Profitable
A little attention to the new rams may be very profitable both from the standpoint of the individual and the attention given. A large percentage of rams which change hands during the fall go direct from the raisers and fitters to the farm flock owner. Sheep on the average farm are usually considered a side line, and sometimes receive very little attention. The rams need flesh and should be purchased in good breeding condition, not overlooking the conformation and make-up. As a rule breeding animals are thin and underfed, a condition which should not exist.
Some breeders discriminate against a heavy fleece on the ram, and it is indeed burdensome if he lugs it around during the breeding season. This difficulty, however, can easily be remedied by clipping the ram at breeding time.

FARM FACTS

Sweet clover makes old land young again.
A one-crop country is never prosperous.
Alfalfa is the oldest plant to have been cultivated for forage alone.
The necessity of light work or active daily exercise for the brood mare must be stressed.
Cranking a tractor while it's in gear is just another way of saying, "I didn't know it was loaded."
Lime increases the yield of corn and many other crops 20 per cent, experiment station records show.
Alfalfa seed from Turkestan and Africa has been added to Italian red clover seed as unsuited to plant in most of the United States and must be dyed before being sold in this country.

PRINTERS HIT GAS

Forty-five Columbus Men "In On" Morgan County Strike.

Forty-five union printers in Columbus believe they are on the road to fortune.
The first gas well drilled on a farm in Pennsville, Morgan county, which they leased, came in Tuesday with an estimated output of 750,000 cubic feet.
The printers form the Malta Gas & Oil Co., of which B. F. Gordon, 574 Franklin avenue, Columbus, Citizen printer, is president, and Councilman Frank C. Karns, also a printer, secretary.
The profits from the one well alone is expected to reach $38,000 annually. More wells are to be drilled. Thirty-two producing oil wells are on the land.
The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. has purchased the output of the printers' wells.

QUEEN ESTHER CIRCLE MEETS

The Queen Esther Circle of the Methodist church met at the home of their leader, Mrs. Morris, Tuesday evening. The meeting was called to order by the president, Dorothy Denman and was opened by singing "Lead On Oh King Eternal." The scripture lesson was read by Pauline Hill followed by the Queen Esther responsive reading, and the Lord's Prayer. The business meeting was opened and very important matters were discussed. They were then favored with a piano duet by Katherine Morris and Iona Miller. Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in games.

HUMAN ARMS ARE FOUND BY TOLEDO HUNTERS

Another Gruesome Chapter Added To Head Mystery—Boot-leggers Suspected.

Toledo, Jan. 5.—Two human arms—arms that probably engaged in a futile death struggle with desperate killers—were found in the snow west of this city today.
They have added another gruesome chapter to Toledo's head mystery—a case of butchery unparalleled in the annals of Lucas County crime.
A woman hunter and her husband were led to the arms by a leaping bob-tailed rabbit. They saw an elbow protruding from the underbrush skirting the rabbit's retreat and pulled up a long, sinewy arm, bullet shattered and tattooed with a heart encircling the letters. The arms had been hacked off at the shoulders and undoubtedly are those of the tortured man whose head was found mired in a ditch near the Ohio-Michigan state line Thanksgiving eve.
Finger print impressions will be sent to police departments in various cities. Coroner Charles Hensler is preserving the head of the man who detectives believed paid the death penalty for having informed on a gang of boot-leggers.

Weighty Subject
An instructor in New York university got a fractured skull recently in a philosophical argument. It is supposed he was struck with the truth of the Kantian theory of categories. This is a very weighty subject.—Atchison Globe.

Spooning Encouraged
As a step to encourage courtship and marriage the Wortley district council has closed two miles of a country lane near Ecclesfield, England, to all but pedestrian traffic after dark. Complaints had been received that motor traffic made courtship impossible.

ENGLISH AT HANKOW CONCESSION FLEE

THOUSANDS OF FOREIGNERS' LIVES HANG IN THE BALANCE

World Awaits Fate of Be-leagured White People Exposed To the Fury of the Coolies—American Volunteers Mobilized, But Remain In Headquarters Adjoining English Group—Torch of Fanaticism Let Loose By Bolshevistic Agents In Chinese Army.

For the first time since its establishment as a little English city on the Yangtse river in 1861, Hankow is slipping from British control into the grip of the Chinese Nationalists.

After a night of unrelaxed tension, the outgrowth of the anti-British activities in the Yangtse river region, all the British women and children in Hankow are on vessels bound for Shanghai, while the men of the British concession are concentrated in two buildings.

Many of the American women and children, who had been concentrated at the American consulate, have been transferred to warships and other craft in the river.

The situation continues to be most grave, with the British naval and civil authorities straining every effort to avert clashes and yielding to the Chinese to an extent which a few years ago would not have been dreamed of, all because it is realized that the smallest provocation spark might start blaze of uncontrollable Nationalist disorder.

Following upon the action of the British in withdrawing their marines Tuesday all the volunteer police forces have been disarmed and the Chinese population left free to circulate at will the British quarter.

The British are relying on the pledge of Eugene Chen, Cantonese foreign minister, of full responsibility for law and order within the concession.

Chen has insisted the Cantonese forces will be able to keep order in the district which the British policed until a few days ago if the Chinese are not antagonized.

Representatives of laborers, farmers, merchants, students and soldiers have formulated demands to be presented thru the Cantonese government to the British consul, including a demand for indemnity for Chinese killed in the disturbances Monday, with withdrawal of gunboats and an apology to the Chinese government.

All business in the city is at a standstill. The voluntary military organizations of the British community are aboard warships in the river and British subjects have been warned not to venture on the streets.

Meanwhile, the Nationalists are tightening their control. British flags on the municipal building have been replaced by the Cantonese emblem and all other union jacks have been hauled down. Other reports reaching London are that the streets are placarded with signs exhorting the natives to "crush British imperialism."

Chen Thursday night, however, "ten-

DEATH OF INFANT.

Jean, daughter of Thomas and Jessie Smith Coyne, of West High street, died Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock aged four days. The interment was made in Forest cemetery this morning at 9 o'clock by Mader & Ebert.

Old Table Utensil

dered profound apologies" to the British consul for the desecration by a mob of the British war memorial, and he announced he would undertake to repay the damage to the stone facing of the memorial.

This is in line with the British belief that Chen will do everything in his power to carry out his pledges.

Behind the scenes, however, extremist agitators are trying to force the fighting by such means as the demands on the British consul. These demands were couched in the form of an ultimatum insisting on compliance within 72 hours.

The Episcopal board of Missions of New York Thursday received a cablegram Thursday dated Hankow, January 6, and stated: "Staff in Kankow and Wuchang are safe and well. No violence reported from outstations." The signer of the dispatch is Right Rev. Logan H. Roots, missionary bishop of the Episcopal district of Hankow.

They violated their parole by not doing as they promised.

Emulating Elephant Is Urged for Longevity

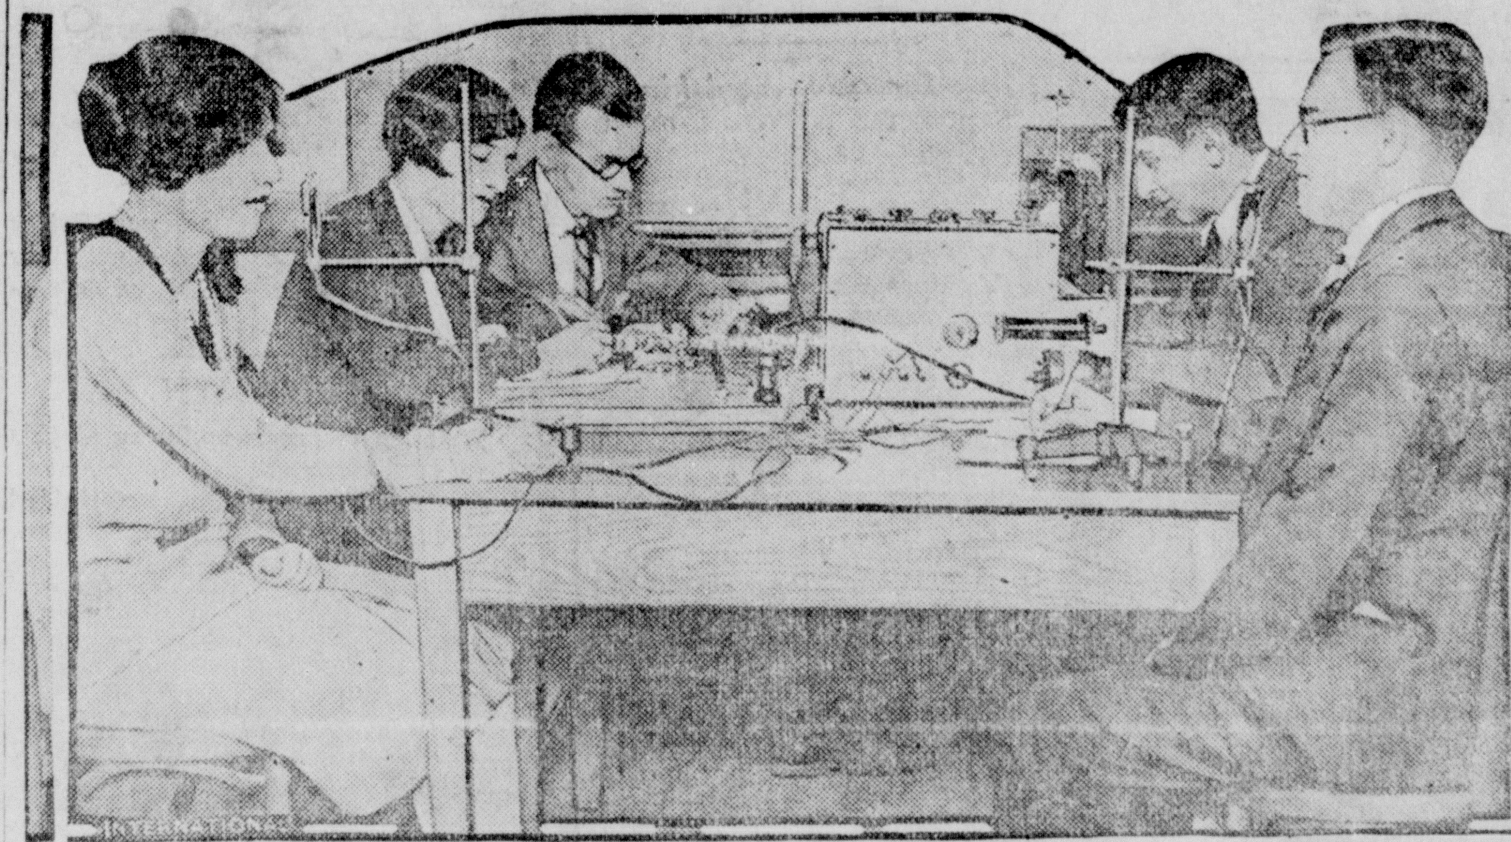

New York.—To be cool and calm at all times and impervious to the unpleasant titillation of nerves emulate the elephant, says Thomas R. Gaines, a lecturer before the Brooklyn institute on "The Science of Health."

The longevity of the elephant, Mr. Gaines asserts, is directly attributable to his poise and repose, and those in turn may be traced fairly certainly to his habit of slow breathing. The elephant breathes only five times a minute as compared with eighteen for the normal human.

While his audience made experimental sniffs, Mr. Gaines enunciated the requisite remainder of his theory:

"The general attitude should be one of wholesome indifference."

Detecting Crime by Electrical Machinery

By use of an "electrical third degree," Dr. A. P. Link of the psychology department, New York university, demonstrated that crime can be detected by machinery. Three persons were used as subjects, one of them being supposed to have knowledge of a "crime" and the others to know nothing of it. The three were subjected to successful tests by three electrical devices to determine the guilty party. One machine records the time required to answer questions. A second device, the electrical stethoscope, magnified the heart beat, and the third was an apparatus for measuring electrical resistance of the human skin.

NAMED FOR I. C. C.

Cyrus E. Woods, former ambassador to Spain and Japan, has been named by President Coolidge to be a member of the interstate commerce commission.

High-Speed Insect Suggests Plane Design

Washington.—One branch of aviation research has been turned from study of the planing gull and the soaring eagle to scrutiny of a tiny fly as holding the possible answer to "the next step" in airplane design.

Not long ago an American entomologist, standing beside a canyon in the wilds of Brazil, saw a flash of color—a mere blur of orange—flit before his eyes. A search identified the insect-missile as a new variety of deer-fly, scientifically catalogued as the cephomyia, and capable of flight at the speed of 815 miles an hour, about half the speed of a rifle bullet.

His report aroused interest of engineers, several of whom are now studying the "stream lines" and motive plant of the new subject. The fly is about the size of a humblebee.

Unique American Woman

I have made the admission more than once that of all the women in the world the women of America always appeal most strongly to my attention. I have, I believe, for many years vainly attempted to get into the minds of my countrymen the idea that the American woman is a unique specimen of the sex, standing in temperament, in conditions, in outlook, apart from her sister in other nations.—T. P. O'Connor.

Man is not the only animal engaged in harvesting. For example, says the Nature Magazine, how many of the following actually store food for future use so far as you can determine during October: Woodchucks, chipmunks, red squirrels, deer, muskrats, meadow mice, deer mice, skunks, dogs, cats, cows, horses, sheep and others?

Emergency Gowns Late Paris Mode

in New Designs.

A wardrobe may boast of stately velvet gowns, of chic jacket suits, of ensembles for the day and ensembles for the evening, but until it includes one or more of those unpretentious yet useful garments designated by the French designers as "little" gowns, it cannot be said to be complete, asserts a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Times. These little gowns are, in reality, emergency gowns, suitable for most occasions short of the very formal or informal—they combine cheerfully with the odd coat or, if necessary, serve as street dresses on warmer days.

Such a dress is the one from Jaquet in a soft black crepe satin, draped, if so slight a movement could be called draped, to the left side. Like most of the new draped dresses, this gown has in the back a bloused waist above a straight skirt, with the waist surplice in front draping to the left and the skirt following it with a slightly lifted line. One of the narrow fur bindings new this season, consisting in this case of an inch-wide binding of beaver, follows the surplice neckline to tie in a huge, flat, French bow-knot at the left beltline before it continues on down the overlapped side and around the bottom of the skirt. The long bell sleeves over a puffed undersleeve also have the narrow edging of beaver.

Exaggerated use of military braid—black, gold or silver—that is a characteristic of the new Paris collections, is exemplified in a little gown from Lucille made in a fine black serge. A straight dress, depending for fullness in the skirt on an inverted plait at either side front, forms the foundation for this gown. Half-inch military braid in black and red makes a soldiery row, down the front of the waist, of flat loops held together by a gold button as the uniforms of officers are decorated in musical comedies. The pockets on either side of the skirt over the inverted plaits are trimmed in official-looking loops of the braid, with the straight ends extending to the skirt hem. The round cuffs flaring back from the hand—typically a fall of 1926 cuff—are also braided. A stiff little turnover collar, edged with black ribbon ruching and tied with a severe black ribbon, completes this smart costume.

The new trimming line that is best described by the term, "harness trimming," is found on a gown from Yteb in beige crepe de chine. This harness trimming consists of an inch-wide line of embroidery, or of contrasting material, applied across the back of the shoulders, continued down the upper side of the arm and encircling the elbow where a puffed lower sleeve is attached. In the model from Yteb, this trimming is made of two narrow strips of velvet in shades one a little lighter and the other darker than the beige of the dress. The straight ruffles of the three-tiered skirt bear this same narrow trimming and the crushed wide girdle is of velvet in the same two shades.

For a Christmas Present

Just suppose some little girl, your wee daughter or your neighbor's should receive a Christmas gift of a hand-embroidered French gingham pantie-dress, like the one here pictured. Wouldn't you just love to see the sparkle of this little girl's eyes as her tiny fingers excitedly withdrew it from the gayly-wrapped box which Santa Claus had addressed to her! Well, why not let this solve the problem of "what to give?" The design on each pocket is done in cross-stitch this peasant embroidery being very popular for children's dresses. A solid colored chambray binds the neck, also cuffs the sleeves and the knickers. This model could be successfully carried out in any checked woolen material.

Touch of Elegance

Transparent capes and coats, with the most fascinating sleeves, are shown as a part of the new evening outfit.

Fur-Trimmed

New fall coats are heavily fur trimmed down the front.

Discovered in a double boiler...

the secret of tempting pies, cakes and cookies

WOULD you ever think of looking in a double boiler to find the secret of baking cakes "like mother used to make"?

Yet it was in the double boiler that the secret was discovered. It's really quite simple. Cereals and other delicate foods, you know, do not scorch when cooked in a double boiler—its construction permits the heat to be distributed evenly throughout its contents. And now, in the oven of the Estate Gas Range, this same "double boiler" construction has been adopted. This oven, built on the two-wall, "double boiler" principle, bakes with uniform heat. There are no "hot spots" to cause scorching, no shifting of pans, no "peeking in" necessary—pies, cakes and cookies come out symmetrical in shape and color.

Let us show you today how, in the double boiler, the secret of successful baking was found.

The Cottage on the Hill

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

WHEN Mary Anne was just a tiny girl her mother had said to her, "Always remember, dearie, that anything you want in life will come to you, so long as it is a good desire. You must just keep your mind constantly on attaining it. You must never want what belongs to some one else and you must never, under any circumstances, want anything wicked or harmful to anyone." Thus it was that the power of the mind and imagination to bring forth good things from the heart of the world was early instilled into Mary Anne's receptive brain. And as she grew up, guided by her wonderful mother, she developed an utterly trustful nature.

Also as a tiny girl Mary Anne's extraordinary beauty of spirit was manifesting itself physically. Her eyes were big pools of warm blue-gray, and her hair was like a sheaf of waving wheat with a glint of red sunset flitting over it. Her mouth was softly curved and childlike even in her mature years and seemed always ready with innocent and untarnished words of wisdom.

Her mother and father were justly delighted with her and fostered the growing tendency to live in a world made up of friends of her imagination, yet friends whom she would one day find and love.

Of such fancy was Mary Anne's Cottage on the Hill. As early as her seventeenth year, when, unconsciously, thoughts of a mate somewhere in the world came to her, she pictured vividly the cottage.

It would be on the top of a hill commanding a view toward all corners of the wonderful universe and must be a low, rambling bungalow type that caressed closely and securely the warm breast of the hill. There would be sentinel trees, a few of them, and just a scattering of fruit trees so that the blossoms could scent the air in the springtime and then blow out over the hilltop—little spirits of the wind.

Needless to say, when Mary Anne entered the world of men and her charm swept them headlong into loving her, she wondered which one of them might ultimately be associated with the cottage on the hill.

There came a day when she was slightly troubled since her suitors were becoming a tiny bit trying. She made a background of her Cottage on the Hill and one by one tried to visualize any one of the men in it, but always a flat in town or a house in the suburbs floated across the vision and left Mary Anne puzzled.

"Perhaps," she said wistfully to her mother, "perhaps God doesn't think it wise for me to have my cottage—maybe it's one of the things I am not to have."

"You're young, dearie, and lots of good things require a long time to materialize. Why not take the trip abroad with the Elmers and come back refreshed to think things over."

Mary Anne did take the trip abroad. She went to France, to England, to Ireland and to Scotland, and most of all she loved the rugged beauty of the highland country.

It was heather time on Loch Lomond and the Elmers and Mary Anne were staying at an inn on the very edge of the loch.

And during the long, glorious evening of sunset that seemed to linger for hours on the hills, Mary Anne took a walk along the loch side.

Suddenly Mary Anne felt her eyes being drawn upward and she stopped and held her breath.

"My Cottage on the Hill!" she cried, and couldn't quite believe that she was not dreaming.

A few yards ahead a tiny winding pathway led the way up the hill and there bathed in glory of the setting sun was, indeed, the cottage. It was whitewashed, with a slate roof, and lay there on the brow of the hill as if the Creator had put the cottage there as a finishing touch.

Mary Anne could no more have restrained her feet from following that path up the hill than she could have turned her back on all her dreams.

Then, within a short distance of the door itself and so confused with the joy of actually seeing something that had been a mind picture for nearly eight years, Mary Anne stumbled, turned her ankle and cried out swiftly with the sudden pain.

A second later a big man sprang toward her, lifted her tenderly up and carried her within the door of the Cottage on the Hill.

"The poor wee thing—" some soft motherly voice said, and the soothing hands of a woman were attending to the business of caring for her ankle. And all the time Mary Anne was only half conscious of the big man with the burr of Scotch in his voice and the old gold of his hair and the bronze of his cheeks, hovering about with a vast and tender light in his eyes. There was also an old gentleman with silvery locks and the three of them apparently thought Mary Anne was some strange flower dropped from the sky, so lovingly did they care for her.

And suddenly Mary Anne seemed to be a tiny girl again and her own precious mother was saying to her, "Remember, dearie, that anything you want in life will come to you, so long as it is good."

And she opened her heart to that good thing which had come to her—it was in David's eyes and those of his mother and father—in that Cottage on the Hill.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

SAVE DUPLICATION IN VETERANS' AID

Arrangements to avoid duplication of work among the many agencies in Washington, D. C., engaged in veterans' relief activities, has been announced by Watson B. Miller, chairman of the national rehabilitation committee of the American Legion, who is director of a new central index in the offices of the committee for the keeping of records of the case of every veteran who goes to Washington to take up a claim with the government.

At a conference of representatives of the American Legion, the American Red Cross, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and other welfare agencies operating in Washington, it was decided that there were too many agencies working upon the same cases at the same time. The plan of the central recording office was approved as the only way in which to eliminate this duplication of effort.

Under the plan approved by the various organizations, a record card on each case contacted is sent to the central office for filing, with the action taken by the organization noted thereon, and in contacting new cases, a checkup with the central index will be made before any action is taken.

In this way, if the case has been previously handled by another agency, or is still in the hands of that agency, the central index will indicate this, and the information will prevent the second agency from stepping in on the case until the first agency is finished with it.

In the past, the several organizations have been proceeding without any definite system of co-ordination, and this has resulted in as many as six different agencies trying to obtain the adjudication by the United States Veterans' bureau of the same case.

Instead of assisting in an early settlement for the veteran, the condition of things resulted in additional delays. Under the new plan for co-ordinating the work, none of the agencies involved will touch a case that another is working upon until it has been closed one way or another.

Hospital Transfers Now Hard to Obtain

Transfers of veterans from one United States Veterans' bureau hospital to another at the expense of the bureau are almost impossible to obtain now, according to Watson B. Miller, chairman of the American Legion national rehabilitation committee, which maintains offices in Washington, D. C. Chairman Miller is daily in receipt of requests from veterans or their relatives for assistance in obtaining such transfers.

The situation has been brought about mainly by two conditions, Chairman Miller says. First, is the policy of the bureau to permit transfers only where there are sound medical reasons, and second, is the extreme shortage of vacant beds in nearly all bureau hospitals.

About the only transfers allowed are those which are effected at the expense of the veteran. Several hospitals have long waiting lists of veterans desiring admission by transfer from other institutions.

Plaques Are Replaced on 207 Memorial Trees

Members of the Rau-Locke post of the American Legion, Hartford, Conn., in memory of their departed comrades who gave their lives for their flag, have replaced dingy and worn plaques on 207 memorial trees in Colt park there with larger and more descriptive plaques in bronze finish.

The trees were provided in 1920 by the city of Hartford and line either side of an irregular oval which is central in the park. With the passing of the years, most of the names of the soldiers became illegible. The new plaques stand on iron pedestals 30 inches high and are placed squarely in front of the trees. Attached to the pedestals are hooks available at all times for such flowers or other tributes as relatives or friends wish to place. The plaques are placed in alphabetical order and each is numbered and consequently the series follows a numerical order.

To Have Hall of Fame

The starting of a Hall of Fame at department headquarters of the American Legion of Illinois has been announced by the state commander, Ferre C. Watkins. Each year a bronze tablet will be hung for the post doing the most outstanding patriotic and civic duty for its community. Officers' names will be on the tablet.

Post Takes Over Davis Home

The ownership of the home in Memphis, Tenn., of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, has been assumed by Memphis Post No. 1 of the American Legion. The property, valued at $45,000, will be maintained as a memorial and home for the post.
